CHRISTINE E. JOHNSON
Administrative Director

The Alaska Court System is pleased to send you this copy of its FY 2012 annual report. As required by statute, we publish the annual report to present comprehensive statistical data on court operations as well as an overview of the year's work. This year we have adopted a new approach for the report, one that we hope reflects some of the complexity of Alaska court and government work.

The report describes court system operations throughout the entire state, in all four judicial districts. In addition to the statistical information detailing the flow of cases, we present descriptions of some of our most important programs and initiatives, both in the courtrooms and in the administrative arena. We also provide summary budget information, a discussion of technology advances, a review of the improvements to the physical plant, a glimpse into the civics education efforts of the judiciary, and a list of the most important awards garnered by court employees.

The Alaska Court System is committed to continuous review and improvement of its operations. The work detailed here reflects the leadership of Justice Walter Carpeneti, who completed his three-year term in the position of chief justice at the end of FY 2012. Under his leadership, we have continued to work closely with other state and federal agencies to foster effective stewardship of public resources.

We've designed this annual report to be both a reference tool and an addition to the historical record of the Alaska Court System. We hope you find it useful. It is also available on the court system's website.

Sincerely,

Christine E. Johnson

Administrative Director

Introduction to the Alaska Court System

The government of the State of Alaska is divided into three separate but equal entities: the executive branch, the legislative branch, and the judicial branch. This division prevents the concentration of governmental power, by providing for checks and balances among the branches. The U.S. Constitution and the constitutions of most other states also require that governmental power be divided among three separate branches.

Although the terms judicial branch and court system are often used interchangeably, in fact, the judicial branch contains three separate entities: the Alaska Court System, the Alaska Judicial Council and the Alaska Commission on Judicial Conduct. Alaska has a unified, centrally administered court system, totally funded by the state. Municipal governments do not maintain separate court systems. There are four levels of courts in the

Fort Yukon Courthouse (Fourth Judicial District)

Alaska Court System, each with different powers, duties and responsibilities. The Superior Court and District Court are trial courts, which initially hear and decide court cases. The Supreme Court and Court of Appeals are appellate courts, which review and decide appeals from decisions made by the trial courts. Title 22 of the Alaska Statutes sets out the jurisdiction and responsibilities of each court.

The Supreme Court and the Superior Court were established in the Alaska Constitution. In 1959, the legislature created a District Court for each judicial district and granted power to the Supreme Court to increase or decrease the number of District Court judges. In 1980, the legislature created the Court of Appeals.

The Chief Justice of the Alaska Supreme Court is the administrative head of the Alaska Court System. An administrative director is > appointed by the chief justice with concurrence of the Supreme Court. The director supervises the administration of all courts in the state.

> The Supreme Court sets out the rules governing the administration of all courts and the rules of practice and procedure for civil and criminal cases.

What is a Court Case?

A court case is a dispute that goes to court. The court is asked to decide (1) what the facts are, and (2) how the laws of Alaska apply to the facts. There are two main kinds of cases: civil cases and criminal cases.

Civil law deals with relationships between individuals. (A corporation is an "individual" under the law.) The word suit simply refers to a civil court case and to sue means to start a civil lawsuit. The State of Alaska, just like an individual, can bring a civil action. An example of a civil case is a suit resulting from an automobile accident. One person sues another person for damages to the car or for personal injury due to the accident. Other examples of civil cases are suits to collect money, suits for divorce, and suits to recover property.

Criminal law deals with cases brought the federal, state, city, or borough government against a person who has done something against the interest of all people in the community. The government charges an individual with violating a criminal law and brings a court action to decide guilt and impose a punishment. The charging of a person with a crime and bringing him to trial is called a prosecution. The prosecution for all cases under criminal law must be brought in the name of the federal, state, city, or borough government, even though the case may be started by the complaint of a private person — called the complainant. Some examples of crimes are murder, assault, disorderly conduct, and driving under the influence.

An event or action can result in both criminal and civil cases. For example, a person who steals a snow machine and wrecks it could be prosecuted by the state for the crime of theft and sued in a civil action for damages by the owner of the snow machine. The state, through the use of the courts, could bring a criminal action to punish the person through a fine, a prison term, or both. The owner could demand in a civil court case that the thief pay for the wrecked snow machine.

How are Judges Chosen?

The Alaska constitution provides for the selection of judges by merit; that is, judges are selected on the basis of their qualifications, rather than on their political or social connections. Alaska was one of the first states to adopt merit selection of judges. Today, over thirty other states select some or all of their judges in this way.

The Alaska Judicial Council, an independent citizens' commission, investigates and evaluates applicants for judicial positions for all courts except magistrate judge courts. The council sends the names of the most qualified applicants to the governor. The governor must make an appointment from this list. (Magistrate judges are selected according to a different process.)

After serving for a specified period of time, all justices and judges in Alaska must stand periodically for approval by voters on a non-partisan ballot in a general election. This is called retention. The Judicial Council evaluates the performance of judicial officers standing for retention election and provides detailed information to the public — possibly more than any other jurisdiction in the world — and makes recommendations to the voters regarding retention. In preparing its recommendations, the council surveys attorneys, peace and probation officers, court employees, and others regarding the conduct of individual judges.

Other Justice System Participants

This introductory profile discusses the roles of justices, judges and magistrate judges in the court system. However, many persons who are not part of the court system are involved with the larger justice system. For example:

- A plaintiff is the person (or group, or corporation, etc.) who first brings a case to court and starts the court action.
- A defendant is the person (or group, or corporation, etc.) who is on the other side of the dispute that the plaintiff has brought to court.
- A peace officer or law enforcement officer (for example, a policeman or state trooper) is a person who is responsible for maintaining order, enforcing the law, and preventing and detecting crime. A peace officer is not employed by the judicial system, but instead works in the executive branch of government in the Department of Public Safety or for a city government.
- A lanyer (also called an attorney, counsel, or counselor) is a person who is trained in legal matters and licensed to practice law. A lawyer acts on behalf of other people in legal matters, who are referred to as clients. A lawyer's main duty is to his or her client, although the lawyer must also meet other obligations. (For example, a lawyer cannot knowingly make a false statement in court, even at a client's request.)

Some lawyers have special titles. A lawyer who is appointed by the court to represent a defendant in a criminal case because the defendant cannot afford to hire his or her own lawyer is usually employed by the Public Defender Agency and referred to as an Assistant Public Defender. In general, a lawyer who represents the State of Alaska in a criminal case is an Assistant District Attorney, and a lawyer who represents the state in a civil case is an Assistant Attorney General. Any lawyer who represents state or local government in a criminal case may be called the prosecutor or the prosecuting attorney.

The Alaska Supreme Court

The Alaska Supreme Court is the highest level of state court in Alaska. It hears appeals from lower state courts and also administers the state's judicial system.

The Supreme Court includes the chief justice and four associate justices. The five justices, by majority vote, select one of their members to be the chief justice. The chief justice holds that office for three years and may not serve consecutive terms.

The Supreme Court hears oral argument in cases on a monthly basis in Anchorage, approximately each quarter in Fairbanks and Juneau, and on occasion in other Alaskan communities. The court prefers to hear oral argument in the judicial district where the case was originally heard by the trial court.

The court meets bi-weekly to confer on cases argued orally and cases submitted on the briefs—that is, without oral argument. The court decides the cases and publishes its decisions in one of three ways—as an Opinion, a Memorandum Opinion and Judgment (MOO), or an Order. Opinions explain in detail the legal reasoning supporting the decision and are published in the official Pacific Reporter and Alaska Reporter. Memorandum Opinions and Judgments also explain the legal reasoning but are not published in the official reporters. Orders rule summarily on the merits of cases or dismiss them, include little or no legal reasoning, and are not published in the official reporters.

Although MO&Js and most Orders are not published, they are available for public inspection at the office of the Clerk of the Appellate Courts. Current MO&Js are also available on the Alaska Court System website at http://www.state.ak.us/courts and through some subscription legal research services.

Under the state constitution, the Supreme Court establishes rules for the administration of all courts in the state and for practice and procedure in civil and criminal cases. The Supreme Court also adopts rules for the practice of law in Alaska. The legislature may change the court's procedural rules by passing an act expressing its intent to do so by a two-thirds majority of both houses.

Supreme Court Jurisdiction

The term jurisdiction means a court's legal power and authority to hear particular types of cases. The Supreme Court has final state appellate jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters as follows:

Appeals — The Supreme Court must accept appeals from final decisions by the Superior Court in civil cases (including cases that originated in administrative agencies).

Discretionary Matters — The Supreme Court may exercise its discretion to accept:

Petitions for Hearing of final appellate decisions of the Court of Appeals (criminal) or Superior Court (civil);

Petitions for Review of non-final orders by the Court of Appeals in criminal cases and the Superior Court in civil cases; and judges. The Court of Appeals was created in justice to serve a two-year term.

Original Applications in matters for which relief is not otherwise available, including bar admission and attorney discipline matters and questions of state law certified from the federal courts.

The Court of Appeals is a three-judge court 1980 by the Alaska Legislature. The chief judge consisting of a chief judge and two associate of the Court of Appeals is appointed by the chief

Court of Appeals Jurisdiction

The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction to hear appeals in cases involving criminal prosecutions, post-conviction relief, juvenile delinquency, extradition, habeas corpus, probation and parole, bail, and the excessiveness or leniency of a sentence, as follows:

Appeals — The Court of Appeals must accept appeals from final decisions by the Superior Court or the District Court in criminal cases. These include merit appeals (issues concerning the merits of a conviction) and sentence appeals (issues concerning the excessiveness or leniency of a sentence).

Discretionary Matters — The Court of Appeals may exercise its discretion to accept:

Petitions for Review of non-final orders from the Superior Court or the District Court;

Petitions for Hearing of final appellate decisions of the Superior Court on review of the District Court's decisions; and Original Applications in matters for which relief cannot be obtained from the court through one of the above procedures.

Trial Courts

Trial courts hear court cases when they are initiated and render decisions on the law and facts of cases that fall within their jurisdiction. The two levels of trial court in the Alaska Court System are the Superior Court and the District Court.

The trial courts in Alaska are divided among four judicial districts, whose boundaries are defined by statute. In January of each year, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court designates a Superior Court judge from each of Alaska's four judicial districts to serve as presiding judge for a term of one calendar year. The presiding judge, in addition to regular judicial duties, is responsible for the administration of the trial courts within the district, including assignment of cases, supervision of court personnel, efficient handling of court business and appointment of magistrate judges. Assisting the presiding judge with administrative responsibilities for each judicial district are the area court administrators.

Superior Court

The Superior Court is the trial court of general jurisdiction. There are forty-two Superior Court judgeships throughout the state. The Superior Court has the authority to hear civil and criminal cases properly brought before the state courts, with the very limited exception of matters taken directly to the Supreme Court. As a matter of practice, however, the Superior Court does not routinely hear cases that may be brought in the District Court, a court of limited jurisdiction.

Superior Court Jurisdiction

The Superior Court:

 is a trial court for both criminal and civil cases;

- serves as an appellate court for appeals from civil and criminal cases which have been tried in the District Court;
- hears cases involving children who have committed crimes (juvenile delinquency) or who are abused or neglected (child in need of aid);
- hears cases involving the property of incompetent or deceased persons;
- hears cases involving involuntary commitment of persons to institutions for the mentally ill;
- handles domestic relations matters; and
- · handles guardianships and conservatorships.

District Court

The District Court is a trial court of limited jurisdiction. Its powers are narrower than those of the Superior Court. At the time of statehood in 1959, the legislature created a District Court for each judicial district and granted the Supreme Court the authority to increase or decrease the number of District Court judges within each judicial district. There are currently twenty-three District Court judges serving in three of the four judicial districts.

Magistrate judges are judicial officers of the District Court whose authority is more limited than the authority of a District Court judge. They preside over certain types of cases in areas of the state where the services of a full-time District Court judge are not required. Some magistrate judges serve more than one court location. Magistrate judges also serve in metropolitan areas to handle routine matters and ease the workload of the District Court judges. A magistrate judge is not required to be a lawyer.

District Court Judge Jurisdiction

A District Court judge may:

- hear state misdemeanors and minor offenses and violations of city and borough ordinances;
- issue summonses, arrest warrants, and search warrants;
- hear first appearances and preliminary hearings in felony cases;
- hear civil cases involving claims not to exceed a value of $100,000 per defendant;
- hear small claims cases ($10,000 maximum for most cases; $20,000 for wage claims brought by the Department of Labor);
- handle cases involving children on an emergency basis;
- hear domestic violence cases; and
- handle inquests and presumptive death hearings.

Dimond Courthouse, Juneau (First Judicial District)

Magistrate Judge Jurisdiction

A magistrate judge may:

- hear trials of municipal ordinance violations, state traffic infractions, and other minor offenses;
- hold trials and enter judgments in state misdemeanors if a defendant agrees in writing to be tried by a magistrate judge;
- issue summonses, arrest warrants, and search warrants;
- preside over preliminary hearings in felony cases;
- hear formal civil cases ($10,000 maximum);
- hear small claims cases ($10,000 maximum for most cases; $20,000 for wage claims brought by the Department of Labor);
- handle cases involving children on an emergency basis;

- hear domestic violence cases;
- handle inquest and presumptive death hearings;
- issue writs of habeas corpus (challenges to the legality of a person's confinement);
- solemnize marriages and perform notary public duties;
- act as a hearing officer to review an administrative revocation of a driver's license;
- enter a judgment of conviction if a defendant pleads guilty or no contest to any state misdemeanor; and
- conduct extradition (fugitive from justice) proceedings.

Year in Review

The Alaska court system serves thousands of individuals each year, from many different communities across a vast geographical space. The immense scope of its responsibilities has made it imperative that the Alaska Court System continuously seek to improve the way it serves the state's residents — in its courtrooms in both civil and criminal processes and through its other contacts with the public.

In this segment of the annual report, we are presenting an overview of some of the most important programs and initiatives from FY 2012. We describe several of the most important court developments both in the courtrooms and in the administrative arena, many of which have involved close partnerships with other justice-related state and federal agencies. We also present summary budget information, a discussion of important technology advances, a review of the improvements to the physical plant, a glimpse into the civics education efforts of the judiciary, and a list of the most important awards garnered by court employees.

Highlights of Court System Work

Criminal Justice Working Group

The Alaska Court System plays a leading role in the work of the Criminal Justice Working Group (CJWG). The heads of all the major state justice-related entities and other upper-level administrators meet regularly as members of the CJWG. Together they develop long-range policies and resolve the shorter-term problems that arise during the day-to-day work of the criminal justice system. An Alaska Supreme Court Justice and the Alaska Attorney General co-chair the CJWG, with the Administrative Director of the Alaska Court System heading one of the two main committees – the Efficiencies Committee. The Deputy Director of the Alaska Court System sits on the other main committee - Prevention and Recidivism. The group receives funding from the legislature for its work. It is staffed by the Alaska Judicial Council.

The Efficiencies Committee is currently addressing a number of issues that involve the court system. It is promoting a pilot project in Juneau that permits electronic discovery. Electronic transmission of information will make exchange faster and much less expensive. It will also make it possible to track discovery more accurately.

In further work that directly affects the court system, the committee is working with the therapeutic courts on the complexities that arise in those courts. It is also developing a better process for obtaining and handling competency evaluations in the criminal justice process.

...inter-branch cooperation is the key to ensuring the health and strength of our justice system. The people of Alaska benefit most when we work together....

It is also working on a governance structure for the exchange of data among agencies in the justice process and studying how to make the reporting of criminal justice data across all agencies more consistent.

The cooperation established through the CJWG has contributed to the effectiveness of many of the court system initiatives and programs that are discussed later in this annual report.

Therapeutic Courts

Since criminal defendants with mental illness or alcohol or drug abuse problems tend to reoffend if their problems go untreated, the court system has established a number of therapeutic courts throughout the state. These courts use an alternative justice model — a collaborative approach that incorporates an element of therapy into the court process. Qualified defendants convicted of certain offenses can choose to participate in a court-supervised treatment program. Successful completion of the program will usually result in less jail or prison time than would ordinarily be required for the offense. A court team, including the judge, prosecuting and defense attorneys, substance abuse or mental health treatment provider, and others, work together to establish a system of sanctions and incentives that will structure a defendant's program. Members of the team monitor progress, and the defendant appears regularly in court for Slowing down the revolving doors of our courts and jails would free up countless resources for other good purposes, both within the justice system and without. And figuring out what works to inspire former offenders to lead law-abiding lives would give us a huge advantage in improving the health and safety of our communities.

— Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti, State of the Judiciary, Feb. 29, 2012 status hearings. If an offender drops out or is unable to complete the therapeutic program, the initial sentence for the offense is imposed immediately.

The first therapeutic court — the Anchorage Coordinated Resources Project — was established in 1998. It handles misdemeanor offenders with mental illness, developmental disabilities, and other related disorders. Similar courts were later established in Palmer and Juneau.

The therapeutic model has since proven to be flexible for use with other types of defendants. Various courts in Anchorage — collectively termed the Wellness Courts — handle defendants convicted of felony and misdemeanor DUI and other alcohol-related offenses, as well as non-violent felony drug and drug-related offenses. Similar courts dealing with the same types of offenders now also operate in Bethel, Ketchikan, Fairbanks, and Juneau.

The model has also been used to structure courts in Anchorage that handle Child in Need of Aid (CINA) cases in which the mother or father suffers from alcohol-related substance abuse cases. Another Anchorage court focuses on military veterans with felony or misdemeanor drug or alcohol-related convictions. In Barrow, a court handles defendants diagnosed with, or suspected of having, Fetal Alcohol Syndrome or Fetal Alcohol Spectrum Disorders. In Fairbanks, a therapeutic court focuses on juvenile offenders with mental illness, developmental disabilities, and related disorders.

The results of a study of participants in the alcohol and drug therapeutic courts found that, in general, participants in these programs had lower rearrest and reconviction rates than those offenders handled through the ordinary court process. The study, which was conducted by the Alaska Judicial Council and the Institute for Social and Economic Research (ISER) at the University of Alaska Anchorage, looked at over 300 participants in drug and alcohol therapeutic courts in Anchorage, Juneau, Ketchikan, and Bethel. The study specifically found that any participation in a therapeutic program by felons — whether an offender successfully completed the program or not -- was associated with lower recidivism rates. For misdemeanants, graduation from the court program was associated with less recidivism.

Additional therapeutic courts for similar target populations are in the planning stage for Kenai, Bethel, and Palmer.

Funding from the Mental Health Trust Authority has contributed to the development of the therapeutic courts.

Although not a therapeutic court, the Operating Without License (OWL) court, in conjunction with the Division of Motor Vehicles, assists offenders with regaining their drivers' licenses under similar court monitoring.

* * *

These courts illustrate the ways in which the court system is working with other sectors of the justice system to use resources more effectively. The PACE program described in the next segment also involves such close cooperation. Both the therapeutic courts and PACE have benefited from having an evaluative element incorporated in their design. This provides the feedback necessary to refine the programs.

PACE

The court system has continued its participation in PACE - Probation Accountability with Certain Enforcement — a program conceived several years ago in response to the rising number of petitions to revoke probation (PTRP) being processed through the courts. These petitions, triggered when a convicted offender violates the terms of probation, require the expenditure of significant judicial, correctional, prosecutorial, and defense resources. PACE is modeled after a very successful program in Hawaii (HOPE). It works on the premise that the imposition of an immediate sanction for certain targeted types of probation violations — primarily involving drug use — might result ultimately in a decrease in these types of violations as well as reduce recidivism in general. A substantial amount of research indicates that if sanctions are certain to be imposed, and if they are imposed as close as possible in time to the triggering event, they are far more effective in reducing recidivism than if their imposition is postponed.

The PACE program involves the collaboration of the court system, the Department of Corrections, defense attorneys, the Department of Law, and law enforcement agencies.

The Anchorage probation office selects PACE participants from those who are considered at risk for not complying with the conditions of their probation and who have drug or alcohol testing as a specific requirement of probation. Participants appear for an initial warning hearing during which the judge explains the strict requirements under which they will serve their probation. They cannot opt out of the program. They meet with their probation officers regularly and undergo frequent, randomized drug testing. Failure to keep an appointment, pass a drug test, or appear for a scheduled drug test results in an immediate arrest or issuance of an arrest warrant. The judge imposes a short jail term for the violation — generally two to three days. A second violation results in another immediate sanction. Further violations typically result in an increased emphasis on treatment.

The Anchorage Police Department gives priority to warrants issued under PACE. The Alaska State Troopers and Federal Marshals also participate in enforcing the warrants, as needed.

An initial, limited evaluation conducted by the Alaska Judicial Council and the Institute for Social and Economic Research at the University of Alaska Anchorage indicates some positive results for the program, with participating offenders showing fewer drug violations.

The program is being expanded to Palmer for felony offenses. A pilot project focused on misdemeanor domestic violence offenders is operating in Fairbanks.

Rural Courts: Circle Sentencing in the Fourth District

The isolation of small rural Alaska Native communities across vast distances has always presented challenges to the Alaska Court System. In the Yukon-Koyukuk region in the Fourth District, the Galena District Court has begun to use sentencing circles in certain types of cases. As an approach that recognizes the dynamics of village life — the cultural differences, the remote locations, the limited resources for law enforcement and counseling, the tiny, closely related populations — circle sentencing may hold potential for reducing recidivism among offenders. The Alaska Native prison population is very high. While around seventeen percent of the "Smart justice" means weighing — in every criminal case — the likely effectiveness of the actions we take. Further, it means considering the costs of these actions — to our resources, to public safety, and to the collective human potential of our citizens. In practice, it means making criminal justice decisions that reserve our most costly response to crime — prison time — for those cases where other lesscostly alternatives will not effectively protect the public or rehabilitate the perpetrator.

general population is Alaska Native, close to forty percent of the state prison population is Native, and many are repeat offenders.

The benefit of having the court system operate in a village goes far beyond the outcome of an individual case. Visits have helped foster mutual respect among the state, local, and tribal leaders involved in justice delivery, and have helped build greater community trust and confidence in the ability of our justice system to serve rural areas fairly and adequately.

— Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti, State of the Judiciary, Feb. 29, 2012

Sentencing circles have long been an element of traditional restorative justice, approach which seeks the healthy reintegration of the offender into village life. The court is now using the circle techniques as a way to more effectively apply state sentencing criteria. Circle sentencing does not displace the statutory criteria; rather, the circles supply information and suggestions that help the court fashion sentences appropriate to the defendant's situation in the village.

Since 2010, circle sentencing has been used in Galena, Huslia, Tanana, and Nulato with a number of misdemeanor cases, many of which have involved alcohol.

The prosecutor, the public defender, and tribal entities are supporting the use of circle sentencing in villages throughout the region. Judges and magistrate judges from other areas are now also expressing interest in this approach.

The guidelines and procedures for sentencing circles vary but are generally simple. Community residents sit in a circle as equals to discuss the situation of a particular offender; they take turns speaking and listening, and through consensus, make recommendations. The judicial officer uses the circle recommendation, in conjunction with state sentencing criteria, to set the most appropriate conditions for a particular defendant in the village world.

The court has also used the circle technique in meetings in Tanana, Huslia, and Nulato as a way of discussing general issues related to the court system in these communities.

Alaska Court System and the Alaska Tribal Court Development Conference

A panel of state court judges participated in the 27th Annual Alaska Tribal Court Development Conference in Fairbanks in August 2011. The conference drew together tribal court judges, clerks of court, Native village representatives, and tribal administrators as well as representatives from state and federal agencies. The agenda included presentations and discussions on restorative justice, tribal court procedures, and state tribal relations. Representing the Alaska Court System were Supreme Court Justice Daniel Winfree, Superior Court Judge Randy Olsen, and Magistrate Judges Christopher McLain, Alicemary Rasley, and Dacho Alexander.

Early Resolution Project

In an approach now being studied by other state courts across the country, the Alaska Court System's innovative Early Resolution Project (ERP) employs a collaborative model in settling eligible divorce and custody cases. The program was established in 2009 to help divorcing couples, particularly those with children, avoid the expense and stress of prolonged litigation as well as to channel court resources more effectively. Rather than argue against each other at trial, parties involved in the ERP engage in negotiation with the assistance of attorneys, court mediators or a settlement judge to settle the divorce and custody issues.

The court screens new family law cases to determine if they are appropriate for the ERP. A judge reviews the contested issues and evaluates the likelihood of settling any or all of the issues through negotiation. The court schedules six to eight referred cases for a three-hour hearing block twice a month in Anchorage and once a month in Palmer and Juneau.

Juries

Over 30,000 individuals appeared for jury duty in Alaska courts in FY 2012. This figure includes those called for grand jury duty as well as for trial juries. Close to 5,000 individuals were impaneled as trial jurors. The FY 2012 jurors were summoned to court locations spread out over nearly 600,000 square miles — from Barrow on the Arctic Ocean to Ketchikan and Craig in Southeast; from Nome, Emmonak, and Kotzebue on the Bering Sea to Kodiak on the Gulf of Alaska and to Delta Junction in the Interior. They were summoned randomly from lists for each court according to a system structured by the state statutes and the Alaska Rules of Court.

The court system's online jury management system, Jury View, was phased in throughout the state between 2007 and 2011. It allows local courts to manage their own jury pools, while also permitting central administration from Anchorage. In general, qualified residents from communities within fifty miles of a trial site can be called for jury service. Residents of villages falling beyond the fifty-mile radius are usually not called. For specific situations where it is necessary to summon possible jurors from one of these more remote villages, the court system can expand the boundary.

In compiling the list of potential jurors the court administration periodically mails a qualification questionnaire to randomly-selected eligible residents. As a practical matter, the court system assembles its master eligibility list primarily via the Permanent Fund Dividend application list. To serve on a jury, an individual must be at least eighteen years old, a U.S. citizen, an Alaska resident, of sound mind, and able to read or speak English.

Generally, each juror receives twenty-five dollars a day — beginning with the second day of jury duty — and reimbursement for mileage and travel costs. If it is necessary for a juror to fly or travel by boat, the court makes travel arrangements. For FY 2012, juror pay totaled slightly less than one million dollars, and travel costs, about three-quarters of a million dollars.

In an effort to expand public understanding of the importance of jury service, the Alaska Court System sponsors Juror Appreciation Week each autumn. Judges and staff at court locations throughout the state organize events highlighting the role of juries in the delivery of civil and criminal justice.

Volunteer attorneys are available at the hearing to provide unbundled legal services to parties in the cases. In other words, the attorneys provide advice to their clients only for the ERP hearing. They negotiate with the opposing party's volunteer attorney to see what agreements can be reached. Court mediators are also available to assist the litigants.

Alaska Pro Bono handles volunteer attorney coordination, training, and recruitment. The Alaska Attorney General supports the involvement of Assistant Attorneys General (AAG) in this project, and the court's Child Custody Visitation Mediation Program (CCVMP) provides mediators.

If the parties reach an agreement, the assigned ERP settlement judge memorializes it for the record. Appropriate orders, including the child support order, are issued at the conclusion of the hearing, and the parties receive the paperwork while they are still in the courtroom.

In those cases with no disputed issues or relatively few or simple issues, no volunteer attorneys or mediators are used; rather, the assigned ERP hearing judge acts as a settlement judge at the hearing.

The Early Resolution Project has proven to be effective: Over 50 percent of eligible cases have passed through ERP, with a 98 percent appearance rate for parties. Of the 400 family law cases assigned to the project as of December 2012, 80 percent have settled without going to trial.

In 2013, the court system will implement the ERP in Fairbanks.

Screening Considerations

ERP screening considers the type and complexity of issues to be resolved as well as any criminal history or any history or allegation of domestic violence between the couple. Likely cases include those in which:

- The parties appear to agree in their complaint and answer; or
- Any disagreements are relatively simple

- and a workable solution seems obvious for example, cases with legal custody or uncomplicated physical custody issues and few or low-value assets or debts.
- The parties agree on the custody and visitation arrangement but the child support amount is in question.
- There are only minor property issues involving household items, car loans, credit card debt, or some medical bills, although marital homes and retirement accounts have also been addressed in many cases.

Cases likely to be screened out as not appropriate for the program include those in which:

- Neither party can appear in person at the hearing. Requiring both parties to participate telephonically is logistically difficult.
- There has been recent and serious domestic violence -- especially if there are minor children involved in the case.
- A party has an extensive criminal case history.
- There are unaddressed serious drug or alcohol abuse allegations.
- There are unaddressed serious mental health allegations.
- There are issues that require evidentiary findings, such as paternity disestablishment.
- Parties have complicated financial situations.
 For example, they own a business that needs to be divided.

The ERP benefits to the litigants include:

- Parties have access to early resolution, with assistance from a volunteer attorney, mediator, or settlement judge.
- Parties engage in a private, reality-check conversation in private when working with an attorney or mediator.
- Interim or final child support orders are issued.

- Retirement and health insurance issues are not overlooked.
- Private consultation with a lawyer can bring to light issues that parties may not think are relevant for example, property, retirement, tax, and medical benefit issues; the presence of coercion; the existence of a pregnancy involving another person.
- With a mini-legal diagnosis at the ERP hearing, parties can make an informed choice whether to hire an attorney for further assistance.
- The consultations with lawyers in the ERP include enforcement analysis, resulting in orders crafted to avoid obvious enforcement pitfalls.
- Parties receive advice on post-judgment issues, particularly later child-support modifications.

 Parties are guided to the proper resolution method for the case.

From the court's perspective, the benefits also include:

- The parties' access to some legal advice or mediation results in more satisfaction and confidence in settlement outcomes.
- Early resolution of straightforward cases frees judicial resources for complex cases.
- With the file handled fewer times, administrative time is reduced.
- Accurate child support orders are issued at the hearing.
- Final documents are fully completed at the hearing and service is perfected in person, thus eliminating the need to mail orders.
- The attorney-assisted triage eliminates tension about the court's neutrality in settlements.

Employee Development

Training on Domestic Violence Issues

With funds from the Mental Health Trust Authority, the court system has been able to expand its education of employees on issues surrounding the problem of domestic violence. In FY 2012 the Family Law Self-Help Center worked in partnership with the Alaska Network on Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault, local law enforcement, and local domestic violence prevention programs to offer training at Superior Court locations throughout the state. In addition, all clerks of court received the training at the annual clerks conference.

The program partners covered the different components of the domestic violence issue. They presented information about local domestic violence services and shelters; discussed the dynamics of domestic violence and the scope of the DV protective order law; described the police role in serving respondents with protective orders and responding to violations of the orders; and talked about the special responsibilities of court staff in DV protective order cases.

Language Assistants Program

The Alaska Court System has established a program that uses the language skills of its bilingual employees to assist the many Alaskans with limited English proficiency. It is one of the first courts in the country to develop such a program.

Language assistants provide basic help when a customer of limited English proficiency first contacts the court at the front counter or over the phone. They explain basic court procedures and provide directions to courtrooms, offices, and other buildings and agencies. The assistants do not interpret in the courtroom — where highly specialized training and a command of a legal vocabulary are required — but rather they serve to orient the customer. They may identify the language spoken by the customer or the language in a document being submitted so that a trained interpreter or translator can be contacted for more in-depth assistance.

Bilingual court employees willing to serve as language assistants attend a two-day training seminar and continue their development through ongoing teleconferences. In FY 2012, these employees enabled the court system to offer assistance in at least eight different languages — Yup'ik, Tongan, Tagalog, Spanish, Samoan, Latvian, Greek, and French.

The Alaska Court System, Civic Education, and Other Outreach

The programs described in this section illustrate some of the ways in which the judiciary and other Alaska Court System employees promote civic education, in an ongoing effort to explain the fundamental work of the courts to Alaskans.

Supreme Court Live

For several years, as part of its civic education effort, the Alaska Supreme Court has heard oral arguments in high schools in different communities in the state.

In FY 2012, the court heard arguments in State of Alaska, Department of Natural Resources v. Exxon Mobil Corporation, Operator of the Point Thomson Unit; BP Exploration (Alaska) Inc.; Chevron U.S.A., Inc.; ConocoPhillips Alaska, Inc. (Supreme Court No. S-13730) in front of an audience of over 800 at West High School in Anchorage. In Fairbanks, the court heard arguments in Yi v. Yang (Supreme Court No. S-13427) in front of over 500 students and teachers at Lathrop High School.

These sessions were made available to audiences in other locations through Juneau station KTOO as part of its Gavel-to-Gavel program. The court system has now also begun to include closed-captioning for the hearing tapes.

In the weeks before the oral arguments volunteer attorneys presented an overview of the legal system and the appellate process to students in both cities and discussed the issues involved in these particular cases.

Unless the public understands the neutral nature of the judge's role, and the reasons why this role is so important in protecting everyone's freedom and liberty, we will be perceived as just another partisan political actor in a partisan political landscape.... If this happens, the public's trust and confidence in the ability of our courts to act fairly and impartially will be mortally wounded, and our founders' enlightened dream of a government devoted to the rule of law will be badly shaken, if not destroyed.

iCivics is an online education program designed by retired U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Conner to instruct young people in the fundamentals of the democratic system. Concerned by a widespread decline in general public understanding of the structure of the U.S. government, Justice O'Conner has sought to reverse the decline by promoting educational materials on a web-based platform available throughout the country at www.icivics. org. She believes that to secure the stability of the democratic system, it is necessary for the next generation to be knowledgeable about its principles and day-to-day operations.

Justice O'Conner travels widely to promote the program. Her most recent trip to Alaska was in September 2012. She has established a national leadership team of state supreme court justices, secretaries of state, educational leaders, and volunteers. In FY 2012 Alaska Chief Justice Walter Carpeneti served as the Alaska iCivics Chair and Barbara Hood, Communications Counsel for the Alaska Court System, served as Alaska iCivics Coordinator.

Law Day

Law Day celebrates the nation's heritage of liberty under the rule of law. Inaugurated by a special resolution of the U.S. Congress in 1961, it takes place throughout the country on May 1. In Alaska the courts hold Law Day-related events from March through May.

For the 2012 Alaska Law Day, Chief Justice Walter Carpeneti provided the keynote address at the annual luncheon hosted by the Alaska Bar Association. He commented that the Law Day theme — "No Courts, No Justice, No Freedom" — challenged judges and attorneys to "reach out to our communities to explain the role courts play in protecting the freedoms we enjoy. And it provides an opportunity to affirm the essential duty of courts, which is to act independently of the other branches of government and render decisions fairly and impartially, based on the facts and the law of each case, without fear or favor."

Judges of Alaska — Historical Material via Project Jukebox

A collection of material on the history of the Alaska judiciary since territorial days is now available through Project Jukebox at the University of Alaska Fairbanks. Project Jukebox is the digital component of the Oral History Program of the Rasmuson Library at UAF.

The site — Judges of Alaska (jukebox.uaf.edu/ site7/project/70) — provides access to a wealth of material on the history of the judicial system. The collection includes audio and video recordings, transcripts, maps, photographs, and films drawn from the archives of the court system and the Alaska Bar Association as well as from other agencies and from the personal papers and collections of individuals associated with Alaska's judicial system. In the collection are interviews with people such as Judges Roy Madsen and Nora Guinn and Justice Buell Nesbett. The project is continually expanding the collection. Among the more recent additions is an interview with retired Justice Warren Matthews, conducted in early 2012.

Success Inside and Out

Among the outreach efforts of the Alaska Court System in the area of criminal justice is the Success Inside and Out program — a yearly conference organized for women inmates to prepare them for life after prison. Because many fewer women are incarcerated than men, they tend to receive less attention, with fewer resources directed at their reentry. Success Inside and Out brings together women judges and other professionals, as well as representatives from organizations such as the Alaska Native Justice Center, for a day of intense focus on the needs of women soon to be released.

The program has been offered annually at Hiland Mountain Correctional Center since 2006. The court co-sponsors Success Inside and Out with the Alaska Bar Association and the National Association of Women Judges.

Program participants provide the inmates with practical guidance on finding jobs, housing, and transportation; caring for children; continuing their education; handling finances; and maintaining personal health.

During the conference inmates make connections with people and organizations that they can draw upon after release as they attempt to reestablish their lives in the community. Many conference participants continue to work with the women throughout the year.

The program organizers have developed a manual now in use by women judges in other areas throughout the country.

A similar conference addressing the reentry needs of both women and men inmates is offered at Lemon Creek Correctional Center in Juneau.

Advances in Technology

Adapting technology advances, particularly in the computer field, to make its operations throughout the entire state more efficient has become an important focus of the Alaska Court System. The court system is working with the Department of Law, the Department of Corrections, and other justice-related agencies as well as the University of Alaska, to streamline data entry and exchange.

Electronic Filing

During FY 2012, the Alaska Court System advanced toward its eventual goal of handling most court records electronically. This project is now commonly referred to as e-filing, but it is Collaboration best ensures that ideas and resources are brought to bear collectively on targeted problems....

So many important achievements in recent years...have come about because all concerned came to the table and worked together.

— Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti, State of the Judiciary, Feb. 29, 2012 actually much broader than this name suggests. The court system is planning to move to a total "paper-on-demand" environment in the trial courts. Parties will submit their filings electronically, either in the form of electronic documents or data; the court will manage these filings electronically — i.e., without creating paper case files — and will issue electronic orders and notices. The official record of a case will be the electronic record rather than a paper record. Data from other justice agencies will automatically populate the court's case management system and vice versa. This will eliminate redundant data entry, improve the quality of data by reducing manual data entry errors, and reduce delays in the transmission of time-sensitive information.

The major elements of the electronic filing project will include a case management system, a document management system, and the portal e-filing system itself. The current case management system, CourtView, will remain in place for the next several years as other components of the project are adopted.

The chief justice has established a project governance committee, including judges and court employees from throughout the state, and the court's capital budget includes a provision for project funding. In spring 2012, court personnel involved with the project began to travel to court locations throughout the state to present information on the scope of the anticipated changes.

MAJIC

The court system is also continuing its participation in the work of MAJIC — the Multi-Agency Justice Integration Consortium formed in 2004 to improve the sharing of data and other information among state justice agencies. This group, which includes representatives from twenty state justice-related agencies, is focusing on establishing data practices and systems that will make the input of justice data more efficient across separate agency databases. It is identifying ways to capture information once, at the source, and then share it. The group promotes open standards that permit agencies to communicate with one another regardless of the technology selected by each agency.

The consortium is advising on the e-filing project discussed above.

Several other MAJIC projects are also helping to streamline court processes. In FY 2012 MAJIC worked on implementation of a system that permits state and local law enforcement to electronically generate and file minor offense citations with the court, thus reducing delays and errors and eliminating duplication of effort.

The consortium also worked on an e-bail pilot project that allows the Fairbanks court to enter bail conditions electronically from the bench during hearings. The next phase of this project is to make these bail conditions available to law enforcement on the street in real time.

As the result of another MAJIC effort, the disposition of minor traffic offenses will now be automatically reported to the Department of Public Safety and the Division of Motor Vehicles to update driver records.

The consortium is also promoting the adoption of an individual identification number, which will be attached to all the records of a particular criminal case as it proceeds through various agencies on its way to disposition.

Improvements and Upgrades in Court System Facilities

Maintenance of the court system's physical facilities, which are scattered across the entire state, requires continuous attention. The Alaska Court System owns eight buildings outright; it rents twenty-six courthouses from municipalities, Native corporations, or private owners; and it also uses facilities in buildings owned by other government entities, such as the Department of Transportation and the Department of Administration. The buildings vary in age, design, and condition. The courtrooms used in Skagway date from the late nineteenth century; the Snowden Administration Building in Anchorage, built in the 1940s, originally housed the Anchorage Times; and the courthouse in Kotzebue was originally an armory.

Location of Skagway court facilities

Courthouses

Two court locations inaugurated fresh facilities in FY 2012: in Aniak, a completely new court building; and in Hooper Bay, a renovated facility in a building shared with the post office. The Aniak courthouse was dedicated in honor of former magistrate Arlene Clay.

New facilities are also planned for Emmonak and Galena.

The Hooper Bay court shares a facility with the local post office.

Improvements in Facility Security

The court system needs to consider the safety of judges, attorneys, court staff, customers, and visitors. Assuring security in court buildings is an on-going management responsibility.

In 2011, security consultants working with the National Center for State Courts, under a grant from the State Justice Institute, conducted an assessment of facilities in five locations: Ketchikan, Palmer, Valdez, Nenana, and Kotzebue. These facilities were chosen for the assessment because they represent a range of the types of concerns presented by Alaska court buildings. The Kotzebue building is an older, multi-story building originally constructed as an armory; the Palmer facility is a mid-level, extremely busy courthouse owned by the ACS itself; the Nenana building, which is a rental facility, is considered a good prototype for small, rural courts; the court in Valdez is also located in an older building; the one in Ketchikan is in a multi-tenant structure.

In conducting their evaluation, the consultants utilized a set of best practices standards established by various government agencies such as Homeland Security and professional groups such as the National Sheriff's Association. The court system has initiated a number of improvements as a result of the assessment, including upgrading electronic security systems and cameras; ensuring safe separation of staff and public areas; providing sufficient exits; improving ballistic shielding; and securing the exterior aspects of sites, such as parking lots and utilities, through improved lighting and fences. The upgrading will occur over a number of years as funding in the capital budget becomes available.

Also during FY 2012, work continued on the major renovation of the Boney Courthouse in Anchorage. This renovation has encompassed court rooms, jury rooms, and prisoner transport and holding areas, as well as other aspects of the physical plant. Upgrading for the Nesbett Courthouse in Anchorage is also planned. It is anticipated that both of these facilities will reflect the state of the art in courthouses by the end of 2014.

The Valdez court rents facilities from the Department of Transportation and Public Facilties.

Awards of Note

Among the many awards and citations given to those who work in the Alaska Court System during FY 2012, the following deserve particular note. They reflect the work of court employees throughout the entire system — a level of work that has brought national recognition.

Award to Chief Justice

The National Association of State Courts awarded Dana Fabe, currently Chief Justice of the Alaska Supreme Court, its 2012 Distinguished Service Award. The award is presented each year to those who have made significant contributions to the justice system and who have supported the mission of the National Center for State Courts (NCSC). In conferring the award, the organization cited Justice Fabe's many contributions and achievements in judicial work. Justice Fabe is the first woman to serve on the Alaska Supreme Court and the first woman to serve as chief justice; she has held the chairmanship of the Judicial Ethics Advisory Committee of the American Judicature Society; and she is a Fellow of the American Bar Association. Her efforts to improve the administration of justice internationally were also cited. In particular, her work to improve the courts of South Africa was praised.

Recognition for Magistrate Judge

Retired magistrate judge Arlene Clay received the Nora Guinn Award from the Alaska Bar Historians at the 2012 Alaska Bar Convention, in recognition of her contributions to the justice system in rural Alaska. Clay, now 100 years old, served seventeen years as a magistrate judge in Aniak. In a further recognition of Clay's work, the new court house in Aniak was dedicated in her honor.

Alaska Supreme Court

Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti served as chief justice from 2009 through 2012. He was appointed to the Alaska Supreme Court in 1998. Born in San Francisco in 1945, he graduated with an A.B. degree with distinction in history from Stanford University in 1967 and in 1970 received a J.D. degree from the University of California at Berkeley, where he was managing editor of the law review. He was a law clerk for Justice John H. Dimond of the Alaska Supreme Court from 1970–1971. From 1972–1974, he was in private practice in San Francisco — first with Melvin Belli and then with his father, retired San Francisco Superior Court Judge Walter I. Carpeneti, and his brother, Richard Carpeneti. He returned to Alaska in 1974 as the Public Defender in Juneau. He left that office in 1978 to go into private practice. He was appointed to the Superior Court in Juneau by Governor Jay Hammond in 1981. He is married to Anne Dose Carpeneti. They have four children: Christian, Marianna, Lia, and Bianca.

Chief Justice Walter L. Carpeneti Appointed 1998

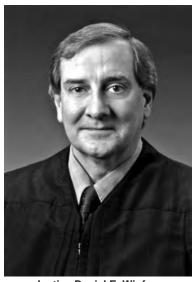

Chief Justice Dana A. Fabe Appointed 1996

Chief Justice Dana Fabe began serving again as chief justice in FY 2013. The first woman to serve on the court, she has served on the Alaska Supreme Court since March 1996. Born in Cincinnati, Ohio in 1951, Justice Fabe holds a B.A. degree from Cornell University and a J.D. degree from Northeastern University School of Law. She clerked for Justice Edmond W. Burke of the Alaska Supreme Court in 1976-1977. She served as a staff attorney for the Alaska Public Defender Agency from 1977-1981, and in 1981 she was appointed by the governor to be Chief Public Defender for Alaska. She was a member of the Board of Governors of the Alaska Bar Association in 1987–1988. Justice Fabe was appointed to the Superior Court in Anchorage in 1988 and was Deputy Presiding Judge of the Third Judicial District from 1992-1995, as well as a Training Judge for the Third Judicial District. She served as Chief Justice of the Supreme Court from July 2000-2003 and again from July 2006-2009. During both terms as chief justice, she served as second vice-president of the Conference of Chief Justices. Justice Fabe serves on the Advisory Council of the American Judicature Society and is chair of its Judicial Ethics Advisory Committee. She currently chairs the Alaska Supreme Court's Civil Rules Committee and the Alaska Court System's Law Day Steering Committee. She is co-chair of the Alaska Supreme Court's Fairness and Access Initiatives and chairs the Fairness, Diversity, and Equality Committee. She has served as co-chair of the Alaska Bar Association's Gender Equality Section, is the immediate past President of the National Association of Women Judges, and is a Life Fellow of the American Bar Foundation. She is married to Randall Simpson; they have a daughter, Mia.

Justice Daniel E. Winfree joined the Supreme Court in January of 2008. Born in the Territory of Alaska, he is a third generation Fairbanksan. Between 1975-1978, he was a truck driver and warehouseman in pipeline camps and Prudhoe Bay, working on the construction of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline and related projects on the North Slope. Justice Winfree earned a B.S. in Finance from the University of Oregon in 1977 and earned M.B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of California Berkeley in 1981. He was admitted to the Alaska Bar Association in 1982 and spent twenty-five years in private practice in Anchorage, Valdez, and Fairbanks, working with large and small firms and as a sole practitioner. Justice Winfree served on the Alaska Bar Association's Board of Governors for nine years, including as President in 1994-1995, with related service as President of the Western States Bar Conference in 1997-1998. He also served a term on the Alaska Bar Association's Ethics Committee and several terms on its Fee Arbitration Committee. The Alaska Bar Association presented him with its Distinguished Service Award in 2007. After his final term on the Board of Governors, he joined the Board of Trustees of the Alaska Bar Foundation and served as its President for two years. Justice Winfree is married to another Fairbanks-born third-generation Alaskan, Cathleen Ringstad Winfree. They have two children.

Justice Craig Stowers Appointed 2009

Justice Craig Stowers was appointed to the Alaska Supreme Court by Governor Sean Parnell on December 2, 2009. Raised in Yorktown, Virginia. He received a bachelor's degree with honors, with a major in biology from Blackburn College in 1975. He was a Park Ranger at Colonial National Historical Park and later transferred to Mount McKinley National Park, Alaska in 1977, where he worked as East District Naturalist and later as West District Ranger. He earned his J.D. in 1985 from the University of California Davis School of Law (Order of the Coif). While in law school, he was employed for two years by Professor Daniel Fessler and the Alaska Code Revision Commission to research and prepare drafts of what became the Alaska Corporations Code, the Alaska Nonprofit Corporations Code, and the official commentary to those acts. He served as a judicial law clerk for Judge Robert Boochever of the United States Court of Appeals (Ninth Circuit) in Juneau. He also clerked for Justice Warren Matthews of the Alaska Supreme Court in Anchorage. He was a partner with Atkinson, Conway & Gagnon and subsequently founded the Anchorage-Fairbanks law firm, Clapp, Peterson & Stowers. His law practice included trial practice, medical and attorney malpractice defense, business and insurance law, and complex civil litigation. He was appointed to the Alaska Superior Court in Anchorage in 2004 by Governor Frank Murkowski. During his legal and judicial career, he has served on various Alaska Bar Association committees, including the Law Examiners Committee, and various Alaska Supreme Court committees, including the Continuing Judicial Education committee. He also has served on several nonprofit corporation boards, including terms as board president of the Alaska Natural History Association (now known as Alaska Geographic) and board president of Christian Health Associates. He is happily married to his best friend, Monique Stowers.

Justice Peter Maassen was appointed to the Alaska Supreme Court in August 2012 by Governor Sean Parnell. Born and raised in Michigan, Justice Maassen received a B.A. from Hope College in 1977 and a J.D. from the University of Michigan in 1980. Other than a two-year stint in Washington, D.C., where he worked in the General Counsel's Office of the U.S. Department of Commerce and then for a private firm with a federal administrative practice, Justice Maassen spent most of his thirty-year career in private practice in Anchorage. He was a partner of Burr, Pease & Kurtz, P.C., and in 1994 became a founding member of Ingaldson, Maassen & Fitzgerald, P.C. His civil litigation practice was varied and included many appeals. From 1994— 2000 he served as editor-in-chief of the Alaska Bar Rag, the official publication of the Alaska Bar Association. He also served as Alaska editor of the ABA's Survey of State Class Action Law in 2003 and 2004. In 2006 he received the Board of Governors Professionalism Award. He was a member of the Board of Governors from 2009-2012, serving as treasurer, president-elect, and discipline liaison. He continues to serve as co-chair of the Anchorage Youth Court — an alternative, peer-driven justice system for young offenders. He is a Fellow of the American Bar Foundation and a long-time member of the Supreme Court's Civil Pattern Jury Instruction Committee. He is married to Kay Gouwens. They have a daughter, Lillian.

(Appointed to U.S. Court of Appeals or the Ninth Circuit, January 2012)

Justice Morgan Christen served on the Alaska Supreme Court from 2009 to 2012. She left after being appointed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Judge Christen was born and raised in Washington, and attended college in England, Switzerland, and the People's Republic of China. She earned a B.A. degree from the University of Washington in International Studies and a J.D. degree from Golden Gate University School of Law. After law school, Judge Christen clerked for Judge Brian Shortell, and then joined Preston Gates & Ellis (now K&L Gates) where she practiced civil litigation. Judge Christen was appointed to the Alaska Superior Court in 2001. While in the trial court, she served on the rules committees for Child in Need of Aid and Involuntary Commitment/Involuntary Medication proceedings. Judge Christen also served on the board of directors for the Rasmuson Foundation and is currently serving on the board of directors for the Alaska Community Foundation. In 2004, Judge Christen was awarded the Light of Hope Award for work on behalf of Alaska's children and the Chamber of Commerce Athena Society Award. In 2004, she and her husband, Jim Torgerson, were named Philanthropists of the Year. The Alaska Supreme Court's Community Outreach Award was presented to Judge Christen in 2008. Judge Christen and her husband live in Anchorage. They have one daughter.

The First Judicial District stretches more than 500 miles along the Southeast Alaska Panhandle, and it has twelve court locations. Superior Court judges, District Court judges, and magistrate judges serve in Juneau and Ketchikan. A Superior Court judge and District Court magistrate judge serve in Sitka. Nine communities—Angoon, Craig, Haines, Hoonah, Kake, Petersburg, Skagway, Wrangell, and Yakutat—are served by resident District Court magistrate judges.

The Second Judicial District begins at the northern end of the Yukon-Kuskokwim Delta and runs north and east along the coasts of the Bering, Chukchi, and Beaufort Seas to the Canadian border. The district's three largest communities are Nome, founded during the Gold Rush on the banks of Norton Sound; Kotzebue, an ancient arctic trading hub located twenty-nine miles above the Arctic Circle; and Barrow, the northernmost community in the United States. Resident Superior Court judges and District Court magistrate judges serve in each of these communities. A resident District Court magistrate judge also serves in the village of Unalakleet.

The Third Judicial District covers Southcentral Alaska, the southern region of Southwest Alaska, the Aleutian Chain, and the Pribilof Islands. It extends from the Canadian border nearly to the Russian Far East. The district includes fourteen court sites, ranging in size from single magistrate judge locations to the Anchorage trial court, which alone handles almost half the workload of the statewide court system. Both Superior Court and District Court judges serve in Anchorage, Kenai, and Palmer; and Superior Court judges serve in Dillingham and Kodiak. Resident magistrate judges also serve in each of these communities. District Court judges are located in Homer and Valdez; and District Courts served by resident magistrate judges are located in Cordova, Glenallen, Naknek, Seward, and Unalaska. Itinerant court sites served by judicial officers from other communities are maintained in Sand Point and St. Paul.

Fourth Judicial District

The Fourth Judicial District covers Interior Alaska and the northern region of Southwest Alaska. It extends from the Canadian border on the east to the Bering Sea on the west. The vast size of this region makes it the largest state trial court judicial district in the United States. Combined Superior and District Court locations are located in Bethel, at the mouth of the Kuskokwim River; and in Fairbanks, the regional hub of the Interior. Resident Superior Court judges, District Court judges and magistrate judges serve these communities. District Courts served by magistrate judges are located in ten other communities in the region: Aniak, Chevak, Delta Junction, Emmonak, Ft. Yukon, Galena, Nenana, St. Mary's, and Tok. Itinerant court sites served by judicial officers from other communities are maintained in McGrath and Tanana.

Active Pro Tem Judges

Retired justices and judges often fill temporary judicial vacancies and help to manage caseloads. Alaska's senior justices and judges step in to handle trials that would otherwise be continued; they conduct settlement conferences for parties who cannot afford private mediation; and they train new judicial officers.

Perhaps nowhere in Alaska has the commitment of pro tem judges been more clearly demonstrated than in Bethel. The Bethel bench was empty for many months in 2011–2012 because of the tragic death of Judge Marvin Hamilton and a series of resignations. To assist in covering one of the busiest court calendars in the state, many judges came out of retirement to serve for weeks and months in a community hundreds of miles from their homes. They brought their expertise and judicial skills to the work of the court and also met a particular cross-cultural need to explain the court process in a region with many Alaska Native residents from small, remote villages.

Appellate Courts

Supreme Court Activity

Filings

During FY 2012, 428 cases were filed in the Supreme Court. Appeal filings decreased by 21 percent from the previous year, while petitions for hearing were up 32 percent and petitions for review were down 7 percent. The category that includes bar matters, federal certification matters, and original applications increased by 42 percent. For details about filings in various categories of cases from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 63.

Dispositions

The Supreme Court disposed of 445 cases in FY 2012, a 19 percent increase from FY 2011. The court issued 117 full opinions and 38 MO&Js. For details about dispositions by case type in FY 2012, see page 64. For comparisons of dispositions by case type from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 63.

Pending Caseload

On June 30, 2012, 336 cases were pending, a 19 percent decrease from the end of FY 2011. About 56 percent of these pending cases were at a stage prior to submission to the court (filing pending, awaiting settlement conference, awaiting record or transcripts, awaiting briefs, awaiting argument or conference, or awaiting response to a petition). Fewer than one percent were stayed or were awaiting rehearing or record return prior to closing, and the remaining 33 percent were under advisement (submitted to the court but awaiting circulation of a draft opinion, publication of an opinion, or decision on a petition). For a comparison of cases pending at year's end according to case type from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 63. For the status of cases pending at the end of FY 2012 according to case type, see page 64.

Time Required for Disposition of Cases

In 50 percent of appeals decided by opinion or MO&J, the time from submission (usually the date of oral argument or conference on the briefs) to publication of a decision was 6.4 months or less. Fifty percent of petitions, bar matters, and original applications were completed (from opening to closing) in 2.6 months or less. Additional information about time to disposition can be found at page 65.

Court of Appeals Activity

Filings

During FY 2012, 265 cases were filed in the Court of Appeals, a 6 percent increase from the total filed in FY 2011. Merit appeal filings increased by 12 percent from the previous year, while sentence appeal filings were down 18 percent. The number of petitions for review and petitions for hearing filed decreased by 3 percent, and original application and bail appeal filings decreased by 33 percent from FY 2011. For a comparison of filings in various case categories from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 67.

Dispositions

The Court of Appeals disposed of 205 cases in FY 2012. This was a 2 percent increase from FY 2011. Merit appeal dispositions were up 4 percent, sentence appeals increased by 57 percent. Petition dispositions were down 21 percent and bail appeals and original applications decreased by 57 percent from FY 2011. The court issued 47 full opinions and 140 memorandum opinions. For details about the types and caseload composition of dispositions in FY 2012, see page 68. For comparisons of dispositions by case type from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 67.

Pending Caseload

On June 30, 2012, 457 cases were pending before the Court of Appeals. Eighty-one percent of these cases were at a stage prior to submission to the court (filing pending, awaiting record, awaiting briefing, awaiting conference or oral argument, or awaiting response to a petition). Three percent were awaiting rehearing or record return prior to closing, and the remaining 16 percent were under advisement (submitted to the court but awaiting circulation of a draft opinion, filing of an opinion, or a decision on a petition). For a comparison of cases pending at year's end according to case type from FY 2008 through FY 2012, see page 67. For the status of cases pending at the end of FY 2012 according to case type, see page 68.

Chena River, Fairbanks (Fourth Judicial District)

Statewide Trial Courts

Trial Court Activity

Filings

During FY 2012, 150,956 cases were filed in the trial courts, a decrease of 8.7 percent from 164,180 filings in FY 2011.

The FY 2012 Superior Court filings were 22,002, a 2 percent decrease from 22,440 in FY 2011. Felony filings decreased by 2.8 percent. The probate caseload increased by 3.6 percent.

The FY 2012 District Court filings were 128,954 — a decrease of 9 percent from FY 2011. Misdemeanor filings decreased by 7.8 percent. Domestic violence caseload increased by 10 percent.

Dispositions

The trial courts disposed of 156,614 cases in FY 2012, a decrease of 2.5 percent from the 160,599 dispositions reported in FY 2011. To reduce the backlog of cases awaiting disposition, courts aspire to have a clearance rate of 100 percent or higher, which means that they have cleared (i.e., disposed of) at least as many cases as were filed in the period. The clearance rate for trial court cases was 104 percent in FY 2012.

Explanatory Notes

Felony Filings

Most felony cases are initiated in District Court, and then transferred to Superior Court after indictment by a grand jury or the filing of an information. Since most of the activity in a felony case typically occurs in Superior Court, felony cases are reported as Superior Court filings regardless of where they began. Tables showing felony cases initiated in the District Courts are provided for informational purposes (page 124). These tables are not included in the District Court totals, but should be considered when evaluating the workload of a District Court.

Criminal Case Categorization

Criminal cases are categorized based on the most serious charge at filing. For example, if a defendant is charged with a felony and two misdemeanors, the case is counted as a felony. If the felony charge is subsequently reduced to a misdemeanor, the case type does not change; the case is still categorized as a felony for reporting purposes.

Reopened Cases

The criminal filing statistics in this report include only new case filings and do not include petitions to revoke probation or other proceedings that cause the court to reopen a case. Likewise, the domestic relations filing statistics include only new case filings and do not include post-judgment motions to modify custody, support, or visitation. This post-judgment activity significantly impacts the trial court workload and tables showing this activity are provided for informational purposes. The number of petitions to revoke probation in felony and misdemeanor cases can be found on pages 90 and 125. The number of filings of motions to modify custody, support, or visitation can be found on page 98.

Domestic Violence Cases

Domestic violence and stalking cases may be filed in either District or Superior Court, but District Courts handle the vast majority. To make it easier to see the total number of domestic violence cases that were filed, domestic violence and stalking cases filed in the Superior Court are counted with the District Court cases.

Criminal cases typically contain multiple charges. The Alaska Court System categorizes cases for reporting purposes based on the most serious charge.

In FY07 the Alaska Court System changed the way it categorizes criminal cases for annual reporting. The categories now conform to the National Center for State Courts' national model for caseload statistical reporting. This change is intended to make Alaska's statistics easier to compile, understand, and compare to those of other jurisdictions.

Criminal cases typically contain multiple charges. The Alaska Court System categorizes cases for reporting purposes based on the most serious charge.

In FY07 the Alaska Court System changed the way it categorizes criminal cases for annual reporting. The categories now conform to the National Center for State Courts' national model for caseload statistical reporting. This change is intended to make Alaska's statistics easier to compile, understand, and compare to those of other jurisdictions.

In FY07 the Alaska Court System changed the way it categorizes minor offenses for annual reporting. The traffic categories now conform to the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators (AAMVA) Code Dictionary. This change is intended to make Alaska's statistics easier to compile, understand and compare to those of other jurisdictions.
